

Rental Income and Expenses

Rental Income

Rental income includes any payment received for the use or occupancy of property. In addition to normal rent payments, the following items are reported as rental income.

Types of Rental Income	Description
Advance rent	Any amount received prior to the period that the payment covers.
Payment for cancelling a lease	Any amount paid by a tenant to cancel a lease.
Expenses paid by tenant*	Any amount paid by a tenant on behalf of the property owner to cover maintenance or improvement expenses.
Property or services	The fair market value (FMV) of property or services received in lieu of rent.

All of these types of rent are reported as income in the year received.

* Example: Your tenant pays the cost to repair the furnace and subsequently deducts the amount from rent. You treat the cost of the repair as rental income and deduct the same amount as a rental expense for repairs and maintenance.

 Example: Your tenant paints the property instead of paying two months rent. You include the amount of rent your tenant would have paid in rental income and deduct the same amount as a rental expense for painting. If the services are provided at an agreed-upon price, that price is considered FMV unless there is evidence to the contrary.

Security Deposits

A security deposit is not included in rental income when received if you plan to return it to the tenant at the end of the lease. If any amount is kept during the year because the tenant did not live up to the terms of the lease, include that amount as rental income. If an amount called a security deposit is to be used as a final payment of rent, it is advance rent and is included as income in the year received.

Note: Individual states have laws requiring payment of interest by property owners who hold security deposits. Check state laws for more information.

Rental Expenses

A deductible expense is any expense that is both:

- Ordinary. Common and accepted in your line of work, and
- Necessary. Helpful and appropriate for work.

An expense need not be required in order to be considered necessary. Facts and circumstances must be considered in each case to determine whether an expense is ordinary and necessary.

Depreciation

Depreciation deductions begin when property is ready and available for rent.

Vacant Property

Expenses are deductible beginning at the time the property is available for rent regardless of when rental income is actually received.

Insurance Premiums Paid in Advance

Insurance premiums paid more than 12 months in advance are deducted in the year to which the policy applies. Premiums paid for 12 months or less are deductible in the year paid.

Local Transportation Expenses

Local transportation expenses incurred to collect rental income or to manage, conserve, or maintain rental property are deductible. You may deduct either actual expenses or the standard mileage rate for an auto (70.0¢ per mile for 2025).

Rental Income and Expenses

Commuting

IRS regulations for investment expenses specifically mention commuting expenses as being nondeductible, which means the same commuting rules that apply to business expenses also apply to passive rental activities.

Travel Expenses

Expenses for traveling away from home, such as transportation and lodging, are deductible if the primary purpose of the trip is to manage, collect rental income, conserve, or maintain the rental property.

Prepaid Interest

Prepaid interest is not deducted when paid. Instead, prepaid interest is deducted in the period to which it applies. Points or loan origination fees paid for rental property are deducted over the life of the loan.

Repairs and Improvements

Repairs	Improvements
Costs that: • Keep the property in good operating condition, • Do not materially add value to the property, or • Do not substantially prolong the property's life. Deductible as a current expense. Examples: • Repainting inside or out. • Fixing gutters. • Fixing damaged carpet. • Fixing leaks. • Plastering. • Replacing broken windows.	Costs that: • Add to the value of the property, • Prolong the property's useful life, or • Adapt the property to new uses. Must be capitalized and depreciated. Examples: • Room additions. • Remodeling. • Landscaping. • New roof. • Security system. • Replacing gravel driveway with concrete.

Example: Ashlyn's rental property has damage to a small section on one corner of the roof. If she fixes only that small portion of the roof, she can deduct the cost of the repair as a rental expense. However, if she replaces the entire roof, the new roof is an improvement because it increases the value and lengthens the life of the property. She would depreciate the cost of the new roof.

The cost of repairs to a rental property may be deducted as a current expense. The cost of improvements must be recovered through depreciation. Whether an expenditure qualifies as a currently deductible repair, or is required to be capitalized and depreciated, is a factual determination. You bear the burden of proof and must have sufficient records to substantiate the expense as a deduction instead of a capital expenditure.

Personal Use of Rental Property—Roommates and Boarders

Renting Part of Property

If a portion of property is rented out, and a portion is used for personal purposes, any reasonable method of allocating expenses between personal and rental use is allowed. For example, dividing the cost of utilities by the number of people living in the home, or dividing expenses based on square footage of use, are reasonable methods.

Example: Phil owns and lives in a personal residence that has 1,800 square feet of floor space. Phil takes in a boarder and rents out a room for the entire year that is 12 × 15 feet, or 180 square feet. Phil can allocate 10% of the home's expenses to the rental. The total utility bills for the year are $2,700. Phil can deduct $270 ($2,700 × 10%) from rental income.

Phone Expense

The cost of the first phone line into a home that is used for both personal and rental purposes is not deductible.

Direct Rental Expenses

A full deduction is allowed for expenses that belong only to the rental part of the property. Examples of fully-deductible rental expenses include painting a room that is rented out, additional liability insurance attributable to the rental, and the cost of a second phone line that is strictly for the tenant.

Rented 14 Days or Less

If you rent out your home, or a portion of your home, for 14 days or less, rental income is not reported and expenses are not allowed.

There are many events that occur during the year that can affect your tax situation. Preparation of your tax return involves summarizing transactions and events that occurred during the prior year. In most situations, treatment is firmly established at the time the transaction occurs. However, negative tax effects can be avoided by proper planning. Please contact us in advance if you have questions about the tax effects of a transaction or event, including the following:

- Pension or IRA distributions.
- Significant change in income or deductions.
- Job change.
- Marriage.
- Attainment of age 59½ or 73.
- Sale or purchase of a business.
- Sale or purchase of a residence or other real estate.
- Retirement.
- Notice from IRS or other revenue department.
- Divorce or separation.
- Self-employment.
- Charitable contributions of property in excess of $5,000.
