

MARY DAWSON

Whether paint, metal, clay, or graphite, the work of Mary Dawson has a signature fluidity of line and surface. Her wire metalworking bowls and jewelry speak to this lightness of being. "As with my ceramic work, I think of them as clouds floating."

Dawson recently journeyed into oil painting. The close-up of the floral image creates an intimacy that focuses on the color and sensuous grace of natural forms.

Her work has been shown in group exhibits at Toledo Museum of Art and one-person shows at area galleries.
