History

Exact Editions is a digital publishing company that turns publications into dynamic, user-friendly digital editions. It was launched in 2005 by Adam Hodgkin, Daryl Rayner and Tim Bruce. The company is based in London and has offices in Hatton Garden.

Exact Editions has always operated on the principle that publications with archives are valuable and readers should, where possible, have full access to the riches that they contain. The platform is equally able to deliver subscriptions to individuals and institutions, digitise archives and provide digital publishing solutions.

Founders

Daryl Rayner

Daryl Rayner started her career in STM publishing, working for Nature Publishing Group, Current Science Group and Elsevier before co-founding Exact Editions in 2005. She is now the Managing Director and lives in London.

Adam Hodgkin

Adam Hodgkin began his career as a philosophy editor with Oxford University Press; since then, he has co-founded and worked for three companies: Cherwell Scientific Publishing, xrefer, and Exact Editions. He is still active in publishing as the Chairman of Exact Editions.
