Carotenoid Complex

IMMUNE BOOSTING NUTRIENTS
FROM FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Are You Protecting Yourself?

Real Risk, Real Solution

While there is no shortage of kilojoules in our diets, the key nutrients that promote health and protect us against chronic diseases are missing. Our bodies need carotenoids in our diets for optimal functioning of key markers of immune capacity, including natural killer cell and lymphocyte proliferation responses.

We've been told for years that we need to "strive for five" servings of fruits and vegetables every day. Now the USDA guideline has raised the bar, stressing the importance of 5-13 servings or more each day.¹

90%

THE PROBLEM

90% of us don't eat the recommended 5-13 servings of fruits and vegetables

When phytonutrients such as carotenoids are lacking, we are left unprotected from free-radical induced oxidative stress that may lead to the development of chronic diseases.

Fruit & Vegetable Nutrients Boost Immunity

The importance of fruit and vegetable consumption for overall health, maximising longevity, and warding off chronic disease is well known. Virtually all modern recommendations for healthy eating include increasing our daily intake of fruits and vegetables.

It's quite simple: When humans eat plants, the phytonutrients in the plants provide nutrition to our cells and may protect them from dangerous elements, providing much needed support to our immune systems.

Carotenoids Are Key

Research has pointed to the immune supporting power of nutrients known as carotenoids—which are lipid soluble phytonutrients found in red, orange, yellow, and deep green fruits and vegetables—that have long been known as immune modulators. Carotenoids maximise the body's natural defence systems which may lower the risk of disease development.²
