Greg White is a native of Mullens, West Virginia. He was a highly recruited high school All-American playing for legendary Coach Don Nuckols. As a senior, he was named West Virginia High School Player of the Year and was inducted into the Mullens High School Hall of Fame. Greg played college basketball at Marshall University where he earned two degrees: a Bachelor's Degree in Business and a Master's Degree in Sports Management. At Marshall, he rocketed to stardom starting 113 consecutive games and still holds records at Marshall. Greg is a member of the 1,000 point club, a two-time Marshall MVP, a two-time team captain, and three-time All-Southern Conference selection. In 1993, Greg was inducted into the Marshall University Hall of Fame. At age 25, he became the youngest head coach in the country at the University of Pikeville. He was head coach at Marshall University and the University of Charleston. He also served as assistant basketball coach at UCLA. In 1996, Greg left UCLA to become Marshall University's head basketball coach, holding that position for seven years. His accomplishments include being named the 1997 Southern Conference "Coach of the Year" and a $6 million renovation of the Cam Henderson Center. He successfully guided Marshall from the Southern Conference to the Mid-American Conference and took Marshall's graduation rate from the worst in the Mid-American Conference to the BEST! Greg finished his coaching career as the third-winningest coach (29 coaches) in school basketball history. In 2019, Greg was honored with induction into the West Virginia Sports Legends Hall of Fame.
