

Know Your Acupuncturist

Acupuncture & Oriental Medicine (AOM) practitioners complete 3 - 4 years of AOM-specific graduate education and clinical training before becoming licensed to practice. As detailed on the chart below, other healthcare practitioners complete significantly less acupuncture training.

Acupuncture should only be administered by a practitioner with specific and extensive AOM education and a comprehensive understanding of Oriental medical diagnostic procedures to ensure proper needling and energy balancing. Oriental Medicine is a whole person approach of mind, body and spirit that includes acupuncture, herbs, nutrition, meditation and Asian bodywork (e.g. acupressure, shiatsu).

Verify your practitioner's Acupuncture & Oriental Medicine education and knowledge to be confident that you're receiving the most professional care to optimize your health and wellness.
