Sunday Morning Message: The “ACTION” of Christian Worship

Sunday Evening Message: Setting My Mind on Christ in a World that Isn't

Every year when we begin planning CONNECT, I find myself thinking about the same thing: The church needs time together. Not just time in the same building. Not just another event on the calendar. We need time around open Bibles. Time to sing together. Time to listen. Time to be reminded that what holds us together is much stronger than everything trying to pull us apart. That's why I'm thankful for this year's theme: ONE: One faith. One Lord. One baptism. Those words are not just a conference title. They are a reminder of who we are.

We belong to Christ.
We share the same hope.
We are part of the same body.
We are called to walk in the same truth.

Hey, look, I get it; life is busy. Churches are carrying a lot right now. Families are stretched. Many Christians are tired. Some are discouraged. Some even feel alone. Some are trying to stay faithful in a culture that keeps moving farther from God.

CONNECT is meant to be a few days where we slow down and remember what is true.

July 29-31, we'll gather at Crieve Hall Church of Christ in Nashville for Scripture-centered teaching, worship, fellowship, and encouragement.

I really want you to come.

Alan Stephens—Co-Founder Connect Conference

Inviting People You Know to Worship

Inviting someone to worship does not have to be complicated. A simple, sincere invitation can open the door for a friend, neighbor, or family member to experience encouragement, community, and hope.

The best invitation begins with genuine care. Choose someone you already know, speak naturally, and share why worship is meaningful to you. You might say, "I would love for you to come with me this weekend. I think you would feel welcome there."

Be respectful and avoid pressure. Offer to sit with them, answer questions, or go for food afterward. Whether they say yes right away or need more time, your kindness can show the spirit of worship before they ever walk through the door.
