

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sincere thanks are due to the following funders, without whose support this research would not have been possible: the Center for American Political Studies at Harvard University (CAPS), the Ash Center for Democratic Governance at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, the Institute for Quantitative Social Science at Harvard University (IQSS), the Taubman Center for State and Local Governance at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, Marie C. Wilson and the White House Project, and Betty and Sidney Shames.

Thanks to the following institutions for permission to conduct research on their campuses: Harvard Law School, Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, and Suffolk University Law School, especially Dean Laura Ferrari.

I am indebted to the following (listed alphabetically) for their help developing the thinking and writing in this project: Marni Allen, Melanie Whitley Bowers, Hannah Riley Bowles, Kennaria Brown, Nick Carnes, Emily Clough, Caelyn Cobb, Porsha Cropper, Kelly Dittmar, Johanna Ettin, Susan Faludi, Nadia Farjood, Kristin Goss, Peter Hall, Jennifer Howk, Tracey Hyams, Sandy Maisel, Susan Marine, Matthew Platt, Beth Rabinowitz, Diane Rosenfeld, Kira Sanbonmatsu, Juliet Schor, Rachel Silbermann, Sue Thomas, Danielle Thomsen, Cameron Whitley, Vanessa Williamson, Taylor Woods-Gauthier, Miya Woolfalk, and several anonymous reviewers. Thanks also to discussant and audience comments from groups at the American Political Science Association's annual meetings in August 2013 and September 2015 and at the New England Political Science Association's annual meetings in April 2012 and May 2013, the participants of the Ash Center for Democratic Governance 2012–13 Fellows Workshop, the participants of the Gender and Sexuality Graduate Workshop, and the participants of the American Politics Research Workshop at Harvard University. Thanks as well to Ruth Mandel for her terrific book In the Running, which inspired both my early interest in women as candidates and the somewhat-depressing title of this book.

Special thanks to my research assistants, interview transcribers, transcription-verifiers, and data monkeys: Nadia Farjood, Johanna Ettin, Gabriel Shames, Jabari Morgan, Avery Hanger, Annalisa Klein, Kara Lessin, Chakera Hightower, Daniel Wallsten, Marion Johnson, Caroline Goldfarb, Oliver Kendall, and Kat Collins and to the research assistants of Nicholas Carnes at Duke University, who also transcribed interviews for this project.

My deepest appreciation is due to my graduate school mentors, Jennifer Hochschild, Claudine Gay, Eileen McDonagh, Jane Mansbridge, and Kay Lehman Schlozman, for their invaluable advice, assistance, and encouragement throughout this process.

Finally, and above all, thank you to all the wonderful survey respondents and interviewees who contributed their time and opinions to this project. Without you, this work could not exist.