Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: Educated Subjects: Literary Production, Colonial Expansion, and the Pedagogical Public Sphere 1

1 The Alchemy of English: Colonial State-Building and the Imperial Origins of American Literary Study 36

2 Empire’s Proxy: Literary Study as Benevolent Discipline 69

3 Agents of Assimilation: Female Authority, Male Domesticity, and the Familial Dramas of Colonial Tutelage 104

4 The Performance of Patriotism: Ironic Affiliations and Literary Disruptions in Carlos Bulosan’s America 139

Conclusion: “An Empire of Letters”: Literary Tradition, National Sovereignty, and Neocolonialism 163

Notes 177

Bibliography 213

Index 229

About the Author 236