Contents

Acknowledgments xi

Introduction 1

1 Coffeehouse Coteries: Civil Dreams of Exclusivity and Consumer Power 21

2 “Citizens of the World?”: Coming to Terms with Cosmopolitanism 42

3 “We that entertain travellers must strive to oblige every body”: Urban Taverns and the Messy Reality of Civil Society 64

4 “Disorderly Houses”: Rakish Revelries, Unlicensed Taverns, and Uncivil Contradictions 87

5 “They will begin to think their united power irresistible”: The Stamp Act and the Crisis of Civil Society 109

6 “As far from being settled as ever it was”: The Revolutionary Transformation of Civil Society 137

Conclusion 171

Notes 177

Bibliography 227

Index 261