Comments and reason for decision:

I have chosen to vote for the AFF side because they did not prove the AFF's 2nd contention was correct. It was a good effort by the NEG side, but they did not give any kind of number, or statistic of what they could be from the construction of the HSR alone. I chose for the AFF was because of the argument. Both ^{members} were confident and did not lose sight of the main point.

IAC

- smart arguments in IAR
- would have liked to see this in 2AC
- jurisdiction claim should have been treated as a topicality argument and been ~~in~~
- could explain why even if AFF was no jurisdiction why NEG, not 2AC better/why jurisdiction no matter
- whenever 2 offences are read, make sure NEG explain why they're mutually exclusive. In this case, I think the States CP links to their spending DA but

- ~~cross ex's were r~~ to be good ex
- smart IAR especially of states CP
- warrant out impact: more GHG emissions 2AC
- good cross ex of where they should have
- warrant out impact: - how does AFF n these impacts

I think the neg loses their offer drop the case in the block, I think Aff, the "risk of the Aff" kind of I think they do this.

So the only thing I have to worry the DA, but I think the aff does answering it (+) neg drops that part. the Greene evidence.

I need more explanation of impact 1AR and 2AR. Just saying the impact is quite enough especially because they get away with the link easily. This is why I vote for ~~APP~~ I buy that the links are ~~not~~ shouldn't vote on the perm. was extended I have to vote

RFD = circled.

Alec

Made a few far fetched links in first constructive but was able to defend them when brought up. Very nice pulling citation out of context, discuss not war (obst was dropped). Felt Auro's inevitable argument was weak, but in terms of the frame and delivery, was a solid attack of RFD.

Jason

Podgy case a but had trouble speaking the way to rebuttle a clash. Another excellent of args

William

Good catch with the dropped... was good out... was detailed...

Brian

I vote Aff on the Framework Debate. I don't think the RS has a net benefit of the CIP so no narrative pressure and the Neg arguments against the Neg went for too much in the round for it.
