

Massive Calving Event in the Antarctic

We have learned through our mutual intelligence sharing agreements with the EU that on November 11th 2021 the European Space Agency's Sentinel satellites captured evidence of the simultaneous calving of Thwaites and Pine Island Glaciers in Antarctica. The size and number of new icebergs has not yet been determined, but analysts expect the event to impact coastlines within the next 24 hours.