Item 3 - A Resolution to Regulate the Use of Genetic Data by Insurance Companies to Protect Consumer Privacy

WHEREAS, Advances in genetic testing have made it possible to obtain detailed information about an individual's genetic makeup; and

WHEREAS, There is concern that insurance companies could use genetic data to discriminate against individuals based on their genetic predispositions; and

WHEREAS, The misuse of genetic data could lead to privacy violations and unfair treatment of consumers; and

WHEREAS, Regulating the use of genetic data by insurance companies can protect consumer privacy and prevent discrimination; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Congress here assembled encourages the regulation of the use of genetic data by insurance companies to protect consumer privacy and prevent discrimination; and, be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) will oversee the development and enforcement of regulations regarding the use of genetic data by insurance companies.
