A Resolution to Eliminate AI-Generated Songs From Music Streaming Platforms.

WHEREAS, the production and promulgation of artificially-generated music takes away from authentic creators, both monetarily and creatively.

WHEREAS, Liz Pelly, author of Mood Machine: The Rise of Spotify and The Perfect Playlist, concedes that: “transparency has been a major problem on streaming services for nearly a decade — and that users should get a clearer understanding of what they're consuming and where it's coming from” and

WHEREAS, Connor Green of Suffolk University finds that “In today’s world, every artist depends on the digital economy. If the courts permit AI to create millions of songs that sound like real artists, musicians will certainly take a massive hit” and

WHEREAS, AI Music collects millions of streams whilst infringing copyright, and now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Student Congress here assembled shall eliminate AI-generated songs/artists from music streaming services, for the protection of job security and the creative process.
