Utorrent movies app for iphone

Whether you're in the office or on the go, the iPhone has become a pocket-sized workhorse to get things done. Here are our picks of the best iPhone apps to keep you productive. Original photo from NotepadNote: To look at the reverse side of the mobile operating system coin, check out the best Android apps to do everything. Android devices are fun, but they are also a portable window for everything you are... Read moreStay Milk Saving tasks is really useful only if you remember to do them, and that's where Remember milk shines. It's not just a to-do list, but it's a to-do list that follows you wherever you are — via all your devices, email or SMS, on the web, etc., and doesn't hesitate to make a er the case when the task time comes. All tasks are well synchronized through your Milk Memorization account. While the app itself is free, the main drawback of Remember the Milk is that it requires a $25/year subscription if you want to take advantage of its professional features. Nevertheless, it is still a fantastic task manager and completely free as a basic application. [iTunes App Store] Alternative Task Managers: On your iPhone, you'll find almost as many task management apps as you'll fart on pEs. Fortunately, the bar is set a little higher and you can find all the flavors of the task management app. While there are too many alternatives to replace them all, here are some other great options. If you don't mind throwing down cash and like the GTD system, $10 Things is a frequent favorite among iPhone users. (Its accompanying desktop app is $50.) If you want to have a little more fun with quests, Epic Win ($3) and Dunny! ($4) both turn task management into a game. TeuxDeux ($3) is a charming alternative if you're looking for something attractive and simple. Finally, EgretList ($3) is a fairly powerful task manager with a great interface that emulates a more traditional style notebook. Simplenote It's hard to pass Evernote to take notes or capture images or voice memos anywhere, but when it comes to performance for plain text notes, there's no doubt that Simplenote takes the cake. It's really the fastest way to take notes on your iPhone, syncs to the internet and several apps on other desktop and mobile platforms, and does it all with sleek simplicity. If you want to speed up the entire Evernote mobile process, you can go with FastEver, but that's $1 lost for what Simplenote supports perfectly for free. Evernote is great for more complex notes with rich media involved, but when it comes to text there really is nothing better than Simplenote. [iTunes Store] Despite all the cool porn performance modern technology has born, the holy grail for me is... All you have to do is install it, visit the URL on your iPhone, save this page to your home screen and you can send links directly to your phone to open in Mobile Safari. Chrome for iPhone is very fast at doing this one thing well. [Google Chrome Extensions Gallery] If you're looking for more feature-rich apps to help you communicate with your PC, myPhoneDesktop is a good (but somewhat expensive alternative — $5). If you're looking for a similar, free app, give Pastefire a look. Dragon Dictation Perhaps one of the most missing features of the iPhone, especially compared to Android, is voice recognition. Dragon Dictation helps fill this void by rewriting notes, emails, and text messages. While it's a standalone app, not a system-wide tool, it will keep you productive when you're able to talk but not write. Moreover, it does not cost you anything. [iTunes App Store] Dropbox It's no secret that we love Dropbox here at Lifehacker. It's a great file sync app, so we'd be reluctant if we didn't include it here. If you want to access important files on your iPhone, Dropbox can provide. Everything you sync with Dropbox can be temporarily viewed on your iPhone or saved for later browsing. You're also not limited to the Dropbox app. You can save photos to your library and email a link to any file to share with others. There are also many great apps that use the Dropbox API, extending all the things you can do with your Dropbox account on your iPhone. With iOS 4.2 on the horizon, we may even get wireless printing support from Dropbox as well. No matter how you use it, it's a great way to manage your files and always sync with them and back them up. [iTunes App Store] Honorable MentionS not difficult to choose from when there are so many great apps. While not everything can make a shortlist, here are some honorable mentions that are definitely worth a look. Google Mobile App - If you love Google (but don't use Android), the official Google Mobile app quickly connects you to all Google services and also provides excellent voice search. [FREE] Documents to go - Expensive, but if you need a mobile office suite for your iPhone. Dos to Do is what you're looking for. [$10] OmniFocus - OmniFocus is another king of the GTD category, which is an excellent companion to the computer application of the same name. The iPhone app syncs with the cloud and uses a mobile platform to integrate things like your location. [$20] Thoughts - When you need to remember the map on your phone iThoughts is a feature-rich option with Dropbox integration. It will run at $7, so check out SimpleMind Xpress if you're looking for a free option. [$7] 1Password for iPhone (Pro Version) - Managing passwords on a desktop computer is enough tasks, but dealing with them on a smartphone is a real pain. 1Password logs you into websites with a single touch. $1.00. $1.00. $15] 3banana Notes - 3banana notes is really an app designed to be mobile. It not only takes notes, but integrates really well with other iPhone services, allowing you to add photos to your notes and even locations (to mark where you parked your car, for example). [FREE] Calvetica - Calvetica is a beautiful calendar alternative that syncs with the built-in calendar on your iPhone. It's simple to do things, and looks great. Jott - Jott is another dictation app like Dragon Dictation, but it integrates with many services. You can post what you say on Twitter, Facebook, and Google Calendar (to name a few). While the app is free, you need a paid Jott account to use it. [$3.95/month] TaskAware – TaskAware tracks your tasks like any application, but it also has one killer feature: it reminds you when you're near the task location. For example, if you need to pick up pet food and you're approaching a pet store, Task Conscious will mistake you about it. Pretty neat. [$5] Mocha VNC Lite - When your phone doesn't cut it and you need access to a computer, Mocha VNC can get you there. While it's not the most features-rich VNC app, it's completely free. If you're looking to pay, check out LogMeIn, Jaadu VNC, iTap, Remote Desktop, or Jump Desktop.This is really just the tip of the iceberg when it comes to iPhone performance, but the above apps are at the very top of our list when we want things to do on the go. Got the app you're counting on when you're ready to turn on productivity? Let's listen to that in the comments. In a world where many apps help you watch movements on the big screen, there's one app that rises above the rest. It is free, easy to use and is the best way to buy cinema tickets on the go. Coming to the iPhone near you: Fandango.FandangoPlatform: iOS (iPhone and iPad)Price: FreeDownload PageFeaturesLookup showtimes by movie, theater, or timeframe. The Go Now feature will feature in the next Showtimes movie in theaters nearby. Add specific theaters to your favorites list. Add videos to your favorites to create a watch list of upcoming videos you want to see, or videos you've already seen and want to rate/review. Get notified when tickets for upcoming videos in your favorites list go on sale. Get notified when the video you buy tickets for is about to begin. Watch trailers for upcoming videos. Research cast, crew and a summary of film information. See what cinema tickets sell like a warm real-time bun with the Pulse on iPadwheres Fandango app has all the basics, such as searching for movie showtimes by movie, theater, GPS location, or temporary, but it is also the best way to buy cinema tickets with your phone. Fandango's cinema ticket purchase system (including paperless, scanable mobile cinema ticket), is used by several other showtime movie apps and services, so do not cut the intermediary applications and go right to the source? You can save your credit card information in the app and buy movie tickets for the whole family at once with just a few taps. Go Now lets you turn a boring evening into a spontaneous movie night on the fly. You'll see every theater nearby, and what movies will be played soon, so you don't need to do any more research. Just choose a movie, buy tickets in the app, and go. You can also get directions to the cinema, and Fandango lets you choose between Google Maps or Apple Maps. If you've turned on notifications, you'll be reminded that your video will start in half an hour. That way, if you're out and about, you won't get sidetracked doing something else and miss out on snacks before the show starts. Fandango's favorite system is also simple and simple. You can designate some theaters as your preferred destinations and keep an eye on movies that are not yet off-show. Just select a theater or movie in the app and touch your heart in the top right corner. All your favorite theaters will be the first to appear on the list when you're looking for showtimes, which is nice if you frequent the same theaters most of the time. When you add your favorite video to My Videos. There you will receive news updates, exclusive offers and notifications when tickets go on sale so as not to miss the opening weekend. Where Falls ShortFandango isn't perfect, though. There are two things that keep Fandango from doing this: advertising and performance ratings. No matter what tab you're on in the Fandango app, there's usually a small banner ad at the top or bottom of the screen. From time to time, you'll receive intersea ads when you change tabs. There is no premium fee or membership or version of the app to get rid of them, so they can be frustrating for some. When it comes to Fandango review results, they are not as helpful as the results that can be found in some competing apps like Flixster and the IMDb app. Fandango's review results are based on a five-star system that is more difficult to collect anything compared to a percentage-based aggregation system like Rotten Tomatoes. In addition, Fandango's fan review scores are questionable because movies never seem to get less than three stars, according to FiveThirtyEight. Fortunately, Fandango shows professional film criticism scores (and Metascore based on all related critics' scores), as well as links to every full review to read. CompetitionFandango has just bought one of its biggest competitors, Flixster (our previous pick), and a review of film aggregation site Rotten Tomatoes. Both Fandango and Flixster will continue to act as separate entities for the time being, but the best flixster will probably come to Fandango soon, and vice versa. A better score rating system may also be on the way to Fandango (hopefully), and Flixster, the only showtimes movie app that wasn't using fandango ticketing system, will probably start using it. IMDb (Free) is definitely a solid alternative (as well as our choice for Android) if you're a serious movie lover who wants more information behind the scenes. In addition to all the things IMDb is known for, you can search for showtimes for each movie through the theater or within a certain time range, and watch trailers for upcoming movies. You can even buy tickets through the app, but the service is supported by Fandango.Most of us know how useful IMDb is for getting information about movies, but few probably think about ... Read moreMovies by Moviefone (Free) is another alternative, but the features of the app are rare and the ticketing system is powered by Fandango. Moviefone doesn't have any ads, however, and uses Metacritic for its movie review results, so it might be worth it for some people. In the same ballpark, Showtimes (Free) is pretty barebones when it comes to features. The app has banner ads, ticket sales are supported by Fandango, and showtimes movie review results are simply the average of the results found in the Flixster app. Contact the author at patrick.allan@lifehacker.com. patrick.allan@lifehacker.com
