A standard four-ounce breach occurs if the average aggregate weight of 10 clams is charged in all samples one pint taken failing to meet the four-ounce standard. If a standard violation of four ounces is found among those undelivered from a particular vessel and is considered a separate entity for sample, persecution, the whole clams in possession or control will be considered in breach. If a standard violation of four ounces is found among the clams owned by the trader/processor, only the clams considered a separate entity for sampling purposes (that is, the amount of clams, up to 10% of which has been drawn as samples) will be considered in breach. -- From the final rules published by the U.S. Department of Commerce, effective January 1, 1986. 1986.
