The CENTER for INNOVATION POLICY at DUKE LAW

The Center for Innovation Policy at Duke Law, co-directed by Professors Arti Rai and Stuart Benjamin, is a forum for independent analysis and balanced discussion of policies for promoting technological innovation that enhances long-term social welfare. The Center brings together technology and business leaders, government officials, lawyers, and academics to identify improvements in legal frameworks and policies that directly affect innovation. These include IP, other R&D incentives, as well as industry-specific regulation in life sciences, information, and communications. In addition to a varied program of public events, Center faculty and affiliates undertake original research for presentation at conferences and/or for publication. The Center partners with Duke's university-wide Innovation and Entrepreneurship Initiative, funded by Duke alumnus David Rubenstein, and with the Center for Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the Fuqua School of Business. It draws on the expertise of affiliated faculty across the University. A board of distinguished business leaders and former public officials advises the Center's leadership.

The Center for the Protection of Intellectual Property (CPIP) is dedicated to the scholarly analysis of intellectual property rights and the technological, commercial, and creative innovation they facilitate. CPIP explores how stable and effective property rights in innovation and creativity can foster successful and flourishing individual lives and national economies.

The George Washington University Law School, established in 1865, is the oldest law school in Washington, DC. The school is accredited by the American Bar Association and is a charter member of the Association of American Law Schools. It is located on the GW campus in the downtown neighborhood familiarly known as Foggy Bottom, and only four blocks from the White House, as well as minutes away from the institutions that will help students hone their skills and influence the way law is practiced. The law school has a total enrollment of about 1,700. Approximately 1,400 students are in the full-time division for the JD degree and 125 are enrolled in the part-time division. One hundred seventy-five (175) students, many from abroad, are enrolled in graduate law degree programs. The George Washington University Law School boasts more than 24,000 living alumni, of whom some 150 are judges serving on local, state, and federal benches, including 10 justices on State Supreme Courts.
