Bourbon

Bourbon is most regulated whiskey in the world. To be classified as Bourbon the whiskey must be made up of a minimum of 51% corn, new charred oak barrels, and has to be all natural (no coloring or additives). During distillation it must be less than 80% ABV, when aging in barrel in cannot go above 62.5% ABV, and must be bottled at a minimum of 40% ABV.

Straight Bourbon

Must have all the criteria listed above in addition to a minimum 2-year aging process in new charred oak barrels.

Bottled in Bond

Bourbon classified as Bottled-In-Bond must have been made during a single distilled season at one distillery, aged in a federally bonded warehouse for a period of at least four years and bottled at 100 proof as originally defined in the Bottled-in-Bond Act of 1897.

Rye

To be classified as rye the whiskey must be made up of a minimum of 51% rye. Straight rye must have a minimum 2-year aging process in new charred oak barrels.

American

American Whiskey can be made from a variety of ingredients corn, wheat, rye, and barley. During distillation it must be less than 95% ABV and bottled at a minimum of 40% ABV

Single Malt Scotch

Must be made from a single distillery in Scotland, made from malted barley, distilled from a copper pot still, and must be aged at least 3 years and one day. It can be aged in various casks including: used Bourbon barrels, used sherry barrels from Spain, and used wine or beer barrels. When the scotch is bottled it must be at a minimum of 40% ABV.

Speyside

Located in the North East part of Scotland it houses the majority of Scotch distilleries. The two typical styles are the light, sweet, and honeyed or big bodied with sherry aging.

Highland

Highland covers the most land mass of Scotland, but because of its size there is no clear-cut flavor profile for this large region.

Islay

Hailing from the western island of Scotland this region is known for its heavy peat, iodine aromas, and smoke. There is also softer styles and unpeated whisky coming from this region.

Lowland

The southern part of Scotland that has very few distilleries, but distill their product typically up to 3 times or more creating a much softer style of whisky.

Scottish Islands

Scotland is made up of many small islands each of which are unique in its own right. Some these islands include Orkney, Jura, and Mull.

Blended Scotch

A blend of two or more single malt whiskies and can be from either grain or malted barley.

Whisk(e)y

Japanese Whisky

Japan is indebted to two Master Distillers Masataka Taketsuru of Nikka and Shinjiro Torri of Suntory. These Gentlemen brought the whisky culture to Japan. Crafted in similar style to Scotch, it has a rough distinction between Speyside and Lowland styles of honey, floral notes, and a softer palate.

Taiwanese Whiskey

The youngest country to adopt the whisky culture, Taiwan is making a name for itself very quickly. Taiwan has long been the highest consuming nation of Scotch outside of Scotland for many years. Due to its tropical climate and warmer weather their approach to whisky is much different than Scotch or Bourbon.

Irish Whiskey

Typically made from barley either malted or unmalted and triple distilled in pot stills. This produces a fruity and spicy note with a smooth finish. There has been a long debate of which came first Irish Whisky or Scotch, if you want to fight an Irishman tell him Scotch came first.
