

Introducing the world's first and only universal automotive remote for fixed - code keyless entry systems.

Keyless entry technology: What you need to know in one minute...

Keyless entry remotes work using radio frequency (RF) technology. There have been two "generations" of this technology: a low-security "fixed" code technology, and a newer "rolling code" technology. In fixed code keyless entry systems, the remote's transmitter emits the same "fixed" signal every time the remote's buttons are pushed. Starting from the mid 1990s through 2002, fixed code systems were phased out in favor of a new, more secure technology called "rolling code", in which a unique code signal is broadcast every time the remote button is pushed. The iKeyless universal remote works on the approximately 24 million vehicles from the 1990s through 2002 which use the fixed code technology.

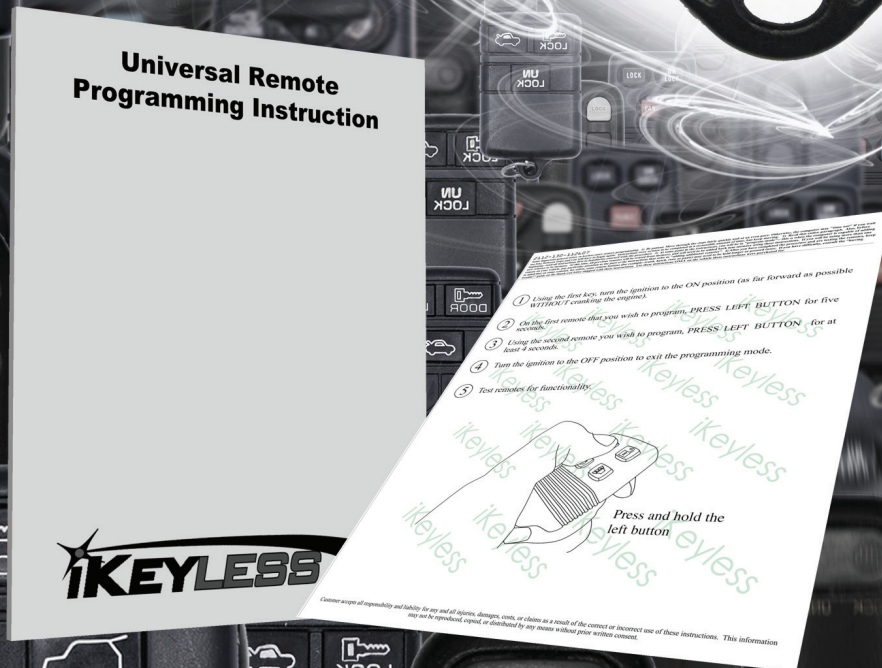

For rolling code systems, iKeyless carries a complete line of discount genuine OEM factory keyless entry remotes with guaranteed lowest prices.
