Disarmament Commission
2001 substantive session
9-27 April 2001
Agenda item 4

Ways and means to achieve nuclear disarmament

Chairman’s comments on proposed structure*

1. Introduction: General overview

Discussion on the importance of nuclear disarmament in the current situation of international peace and security:

– The end of the cold war has set an auspicious environment for nuclear disarmament. Nuclear stockpiles have dropped by half over the last decade.

– Despite unilateral and bilateral efforts to reduce nuclear weapons, stockpiles of these weapons still exist, as well as the possibility of their use, whether accidental, unintentional or unauthorized.

– The total elimination of nuclear weapons is the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons (NPT/CONF.2000/28).

– In 1996, the International Court of Justice rendered a legal advisory opinion on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons.

– The 2000 NPT Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, made up of nuclear-weapon States and non-nuclear-weapon States, unanimously agreed on a number of practical steps which constitute mutually reinforcing ways and means to achieve nuclear disarmament. These practical steps can only be realized through action by all States, nuclear-weapon States by themselves and non-nuclear-weapon States. The Disarmament Commission could build on those steps (A/CN.10/2000/WG.1/WP.3).

– In order to maintain and strengthen international peace and security, the international community needs to undertake practical steps leading to nuclear disarmament without delay and, in this regard, every effort should be made to ensure that all States are engaged in this process.

* Proposals made in the last session are in bold.
New developments since the last session and comments are in italic.
At its tenth special session, the General Assembly accorded the highest priority to nuclear disarmament. There is an urgent need to eliminate nuclear danger without delay.

2. Interrelationship between nuclear disarmament and international peace and security

(a) Changing political environment of the last decade. Description of changes in security doctrines and postures, including bilateral and unilateral reduction of nuclear weapons in the post-cold-war era.

(b) Present political setting and its implications for nuclear disarmament. Description of developments in the field of disarmament of weapons of mass destruction:

– The enhancement of international peace and security and the promotion of nuclear disarmament mutually complement and strengthen each other (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/CRP.1, General Assembly resolution 55/33 R).

– Further achievements in nuclear disarmament contribute to consolidating the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation, enhancing international peace and security (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/CRP.1).

– The Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons is the cornerstone of the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation and an essential foundation for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/CRP.1).

– Further steps leading to nuclear disarmament by all nuclear-weapon States are taken in a way that promotes international stability and are based on the principle of undiminished security of all (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/WP.3).

– Non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament are mutually reinforcing (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/WP.3).

– Steps to prevent proliferation of other forms of weapons of mass destruction and of their delivery systems are important in providing a positive international security environment for nuclear disarmament (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/WP.3).

– Furthermore, there is an interrelationship between nuclear disarmament and regional security situations (A/CN.10/2000/WG.I/WP.3).
