Leading When it Hits the Fan – for Corrections

Leading When It Hits the Fan focuses on supervising the initial hours of a critical incident at your correctional center or jail. Research clearly shows that decisions made by a supervisor on the scene early during an active incident significantly improve the chances of a positive outcome. The LWIHTF course highlights the key concepts that the initial responding supervisor should have in their mental file folder.

We will cover:

- Initial Response Skills - when and how to make those first decisions
- Emergency Planning - corrections has the advantage of planning for emergencies
- Stages of Crisis – how to plan and prepare for what's next
- Human Performance and Dynamic Decision Making – why humans make the decisions they do, and how we can achieve better outcomes during situations that require a series of evolving decisions with long-lasting effects
