

MX400 Instructor

MX400: MX400: Officership is the Superintendent's Capstone Course, a three credit hour required course for all first year cadets. The purpose of MX400 is to enable cadets to internalize their professional identity as officers and to strengthen their critical and creative thinking skills to address complex military problems. To achieve this, cadets study their role and responsibility as officers within the context of the Army Profession. This includes the challenges of the future operating environment as well as timeless officership challenges confronted through historic case studies. Throughout the course, cadets practice interdisciplinary problem solving to think through realistic military scenarios, and conduct self-reflection to assess their own readiness to confront the challenges that officership brings.
