Using a Tennis Journal to Improve Your Game

Your coach asked you to keep a tennis journal? Ugghh! What a pain! Why would she ask you to write in a journal? How could that actually help your tennis? Experienced players know that journaling is an effective way to improve and it is not painful!

Someone that has a Learning Mindset is continually focused on getting better every day. Players that improve faster than their opponents have 3 very important learning habits. They:

1. SET GOALS: They set goals prior to practice. They have a plan for practice.

2. EXECUTE: They work on their goals and give themselves feedback as they practice. They are engaged and aware of what they are learning as they practice.

3. REFLECT: They think about goals they achieved in today’s practice and what they want to achieve in the next practice. They set goals for the next day.

Benefits of Journaling:

1. Helps you remember goals. It keeps you focused on what is important for you.

2. All of your thoughts on paper so you can clearly see what is important and find solutions to problems.

3. Writing or typing in a journal helps you commit to your goals.

Getting Started – buy a notebook or get the Player Development Journal which has sample questions for you to answer.

Follow this link: http://www.playerdevelopment.usta.com/Player-Resources-Main/

Put the journal where you will see it every day (in your tennis bag). Put a pen or pencil with the journal.

What to write about – writing a journal is a personal choice, write about what helps you. At first, keep it simple. Write what you achieved today and what you want to achieve tomorrow. Then focus on how you played, what you learned, what you would do differently, did you follow your game plan, did you work on your goals, physical and mental strategies you used and how they worked.

How to write – be detailed and specific. The journal is to help you remember and apply what you are learning.

When to write – cool down and stretch after your practice, then write while you eat a snack and hydrate. If that is not possible then write while someone drives you from practice. Writing just before you go to bed is also good so you reflect on your day and prepare for tomorrow.

How to use what you are writing to improve as a player – look at your journal entries at the end of the week. Look at what goals you achieved. Congratulate yourself on your accomplishments. Look at what goals remain to be achieved. Get excited to work towards those goals. Look at what you did each day to achieve your goals. Plan what you will do in the next week to achieve more goals.

Confident – unshakable self-belief in abilities and skills, expects to be successful
Determined – pushes through adversity and struggle, and continues to strive for success in a positive, productive manner
Engaged – full focus on what matters in the moment
Professional – demonstrates character, exhibits behaviors and attitudes of an athlete that is consistently prepared to practice and compete with full engagement
Resilient – ability to bounce back and refocus when facing adversity
Respectful – acts in the way of appreciation, courteous to others, focused on the best in others, honors rules of game
Tough – endures periods of hardship and adversity in training and competition, accepts challenges fully motivated to succeed, embraces pressure, physically and emotionally strong

| Counter-attacker | Counter-attackers are able to hit their targets with a high percentage of first serves. It is important that they are able to serve well enough so they are able to start each service point in a neutral position. They tend to utilize a good three-quarter first serve in order to keep their first-serve percentage high. Gilles Simon and Caroline Wozniacki are two counter-attackers with good serves. | • “Half X” — short angle deep cross-court, deep cross-court short angle
• Keeps the ball deep and moves the opponent side to side; mixes in shots behind
• Cross-court to cross-court, then recognizes the short ball and redirects it down the line
• Serves into the body, first ball high and heavy, to push opponent back off the baseline
• Slices backhand (BH) shorter cross-court, high heavy back behind (keeps opponent off balance) |
| Aggressive Baseline | Aggressive baseliners tend to hit a bigger first serve in order to win free points. Their main goal is to use effective serve-plus-one patterns (serve wide, first ball open court; serve “T”, first ball behind). Aggressive baseliners like to start each service point in control of the middle of the court. Novak Djokovic and Victoria Azarenka are two aggressive baseliners with strong serves. | • Able to take the cross-court rally ball and change direction down the line with different spins and height with excellent control
• Multiple inside-out FHs to set up an inside-in FH or BH down the line
• Aggressive cross-court BH to set up a FH inside-in
• Takes time on the BH side by driving the ball down the line to set up the FH that can go back down the line or cross court
• Starts the point with an aggressive middle ball that pushes the opponent back, so he/she can then take the short ball to either side
• Serves wide first ball to open the court
• Serves T first ball behind
• Serves plus FH |
| All-Court Player | All-court players are able to hit big serves to precise targets. They are able to keep their opponents off balance by mixing up the speed, spin and placement of their serves. They are looking to take control of the points and apply immediate pressure. This is all set up with efficient and effective serving. Roger Federer and Serena Williams are two great examples of all-court players with dominant serves. | • Moves opponent around the court to expose his/her weakness
• Mixes up the speed, spins, heights and depth on the ball
• Big inside-out FH, then take the ball out of the air to the open court (with slower players) and/or behind (faster players)
• Short chip to BH side the hits a deep ball to the other side
• Drives the opponents deep and able to step inside the court and to disguise the FH drop shot
• Serves and volleys as a surprise tactic or when he/she is up in a game (looking to close out the game)
• Serve plus FH patterns |

*These tactical patterns assume that two right-handed players are playing against each other.

| Serve and Volley | • More comfortable in the front court, finishing points off at the net
• Looking to put instant pressure on the opponent's return
• Hits spots on serve very well and volleys to the appropriate spot on the court
• Playing match on your terms and at your rhythm | • Serves wide, first ball to open court
• Serves T, first volley behind
• First volley deep, second volley short
• First volley to weaker side
• Defensive volleys keep deep and in front of you
• Volleys deep middle to take away the angles for passing shots |

| Chip and Charge / Hit and Charge | • Strong slice BH
• Putting instant pressure on the server to make them come up with a passing shot
• Great at taking your time away
• Takes the ball early with very strong racquet skills (controlling the racquet head on balls that have different speeds and spins)
• Compact swings and good on-the-rise skills
• Good timing on split step and loading on the outside leg, which allows them to have a strong first step toward the net | • Deuce court taking a kick serve down the T and penetrating it down the line or down the middle
• Drive the FH/BH to BH corner and attack
• Deuce: run around FH down the line and attack
• Ad side: chip down the line and charge
• Ad side: FH inside-out to BH and attack |

| Counter-attacker | • Be patient
• Comfortable playing extended rallies (make fewer mistakes)
• Play with big margin to big targets
• Early part of the match sets the tone
• Create angles
• Use the short slice to draw the player into the net on your terms
• Start out moving the player to the open court; once the open court has been established, hit behind to catch the opponent off balance
• Gain advantage by attacking the second serve | • Be patient and consistent
• Mix up the pace
• Make them generate their own pace (give no pace at times)
• Depth is key; they will look to attack short balls
• Be able to use their pace and redirect the ball down the line to the open court off a cross-court exchange
• Look to make them play in parts of the court where they are not comfortable (usually the net)
• Try to keep the ball out of their strike zone (either high and heavy or chip low with slice)
• Slow down the pace of the match; they like to play with the lead and at a higher tempo
• Half X: deep cross-court (high and heavy) to short angle | • Depth is key
• Move your opponents (don’t let them get comfortable)
• Be able to use their pace and redirect the ball down the line to the open court off a cross-court exchange
• Serve a high percentage of first serves as they will attack your second serve
• Serve body, then first ball high and heavy to open court to get them off the baseline
• Return deep middle to eliminate giving them any angles off first ball
• Two-shot passing shot combos; mix in the lob early to get them off the net |

There are four sections to your Match Game Plan:

1. ABCs (process goals for the match)
2. Pre-Match Preparation Plan
3. During Match Routines
4. Post-Match Plan

In this section we describe how to develop your Match Game Plan (MGP).

Process Goals: The ABCs

Before every match you want to have clear goals in mind. This will help you stay focused on “how” to play versus on the “what ifs” (what if win, lose, etc.). As you will hear often from Player Development coaches, you want to focus on the process during the match. So set three (3) process or “how to” goals that if you do them it will unlock your best performance. For example, one player may write in:

1. Bounce on my toes
2. Play aggressive
3. Big targets

These become this player’s “ABCs” or the basic process for how to play the match.

Think for a moment about your ABCs. What does your coach tell you are the keys to playing well? What do you think you do when you are playing your best? On the next page, on the Match Game Plan, write in your ABCs (process goals).

Pre-Match Preparation Plan

The top tennis players in the world have a consistent way of getting ready for matches. This is something you want to begin developing for your own game. While a touring pro will have a number of things he or she does to get ready, let’s keep it simple for you at this time.

We want you to come up with several behaviors that you will do before EVERY match because it helps you to be ready, energized and focused. Take a moment to think about a time when you played great tennis. Then answer these questions in your mind:

- How did you feel prior to the match? (Write in specific words that describe how you felt. Players have talked about things like feeling loose, in control, pumped up, focused, energized, relaxed, calm, etc.)
- What were you thinking prior to the match? (Write in specific thoughts. Did you have doubts? Focused on your game plan?)
- How much energy did you have? (Give yourself a number between 0 and 100; 0 = no energy/flat, 50 = energized, 100 = overly energized/too much.)
- What did you do before the match? (Write in specific behaviors like gripped your racquet, did a dynamic warm-up…)

What you have listed is hopefully a “target” for where you want to be on match day. Now the goal is to come up with “how” you will get there consistently: a preparation plan.
Developing Your Match Game Plan

Mental Preparation

When preparing for a match, you want your mind focused on simple game plans. You also want to be looking forward to the match and excited to play. Finally, you want to be thinking positive and productive thoughts that prepare you to play well.

DAILY MENTAL PRACTICE (DMP)

<table>

Practice Mindfulness

Practice deep breathing, accepting distractions, and practice non-judgmental thinking

Visualize Success

Use all senses to imagine achieving process goals

Physical Preparation

Athletic Development - Enhance Athletic Performance through a systematic, integrated and progressive approach in an environment that instills habits of daily physical and mental preparation to develop robust, adaptable tennis athletes.

Individual Dynamic Warm-up - Here is an example of exercises that make up effective preparation through a dynamic warm-up as well as examples of exercises for a proper shoulder warm-up and cool down:

Warm-Up with Opponent – At this point, you want to get your heart pumping and feel like you’ve already started the match by giving a good, physical effort. Forget grooving, really hit the ball and get your rhythm at the speed you will play at in the match. Keep the mind focused in the moment by thinking about your goals and game plan.
Developing Your Match Game Plan

During the Match
During matches you are looking to focus on every single point, one at a time. To do this you need routine for between points. The goal of the routine is to be fully ready to play the next point. This means you are fully focused, energized and believing in yourself and your game.

Green Light Routine (In Between Points)
A Green Light Routine means “go” and you use it between every point. When a point ends, players go through 4 distinct stages until the next point starts:

1. Respond – they have an immediate response to the point, either positive, neutral (meaning no reaction) or negative. Our goal is to respond positive or neutral at all times. Sometimes you will vent some negativity but that should be with your back to your opponent and quietly. A good behavior to start now is to turn your back to your opponent and focus on your strings.

2. Recover – next, you briefly review the last point and take some deep breaths to recover. Tennis is an exhausting sport; you want to get as much oxygen in your body as possible. So deep breaths in through the nose and out through the mouth are crucial.

3. Refocus – in this stage you have walked behind the baseline and move from thinking about the last point to the next point. Using a towel, touching the fence or just grabbing two tennis balls, you plan your next point and commit by thinking “I will do this…” (such as serve wide and hit forehand open court).

4. Ready – this is the stage where you face your opponent, walk to the baseline and are fully committed to your plan for the next point. Here it is good to bounce on your toes to activate your feet. Also, keep the mind simple by thinking short things like “attack,” “aggressive,” “patient,” “feet.”… On the serve you bounce the ball a certain number of times and you serve. On the return you sway back and forth and step in to the serve.

Now, on the Pre-Match Plan, fill in two (2) things under Green Light Routine that you will do to be ready to play each point.

Yellow Light Routine (Breathe and Believe)
Yellow Light means “caution” and you have to slow down and make a decision. It is when you are struggling a little. For example, down Love-30 on your serve, when nervous, tight or frustrated. You go to Yellow Light any time that you are off your focus a little.

In the Yellow Light we do more mental work and take more time to fully prepare for the next point. You should not step to the line until you are ready to play! So use a towel, wipe off and try to settle down.

Write in the Match Game Plan under Yellow Light Routine what you will do to bounce back and play well.

Nutrition for Tennis

Knowing what to eat and drink on and off the court can mean the difference between winning and losing. Follow these nutrition tips to help you perform like a pro!

Nutrition: The food you put in your body directly impacts your performance on the court. Focus on whole grains, lean proteins, fruits, vegetables, and healthy fats to play at your best.

<tr>
<td>After</td>
<td>≤ 30 minutes after</td>
<td>snack</td>
</tr>
<tr>

</tbody>
</table>

Hydration: Water is the most important nutrient for tennis players since the sport is usually played in hot, humid weather, and without a time limit. Adopt a fluid plan and drink according to a schedule to avoid cramps and heat illness.

Do I REALLY need a sports drink? If training for more than 60 minutes—YES! Choose a sports drink to help replenish fluids and electrolytes lost in sweat and provide a quick energy source to sustain performance during intense and longer duration training sessions.

Dehydration: As little as a 2% loss of body weight due to dehydration has a negative impact on performance. The easiest way to determine your hydration status is to check the color of your urine.

Recovery: Be sure your recovery plan includes the 4 Rs—Refuel, Rebuild, Rehydrate, and Recharge—check off all 4 with adequate carbs, protein, water, and rest after intense workouts!

Readiness - On a scale of 1-10
(1 being completely fresh, well rested and 10 being completely exhausted/injured)
Please circle what you feel:     1        2        3        4        5        6        7        8        9        10

Objectives of today’s practice:

__________________________________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________________________________

Two areas of focus (technical and/or tactical):
1. ______________________________________________________________________________________________
2. ______________________________________________________________________________________________
3. Mental Area of Focus __________________________________________________________________________

Post-Practice Evaluation

Rate the following:

1. Engagement (listening to the coach, trying to execute the drill the correct way, making good technical and tactical decisions)
   1   2   3   4   5
   Poor   Excellent

2. Effort and Energy Level (run for every ball, look to do your best, positive energy)
   1   2   3   4   5
   Poor   Excellent

3. Respect (Attitude, coachable, try to learn even when things are not going well)
   1   2   3   4   5
   Poor   Excellent

How did you improve your 2 Areas of Focus and Mental Area of Focus:

Athletic Development

Physical Development Components

| Coordination: Motor Learning (hop, skip, jump, start, stop, toss, catch, throw) | Coordination: body & motor control | Coordination: uncontrolled / reactionary | Coordination: Controlled / reactionary |
| Movement: start and stop in forward/side/diagonal patterns | Movement: multi-directional acceleration & deceleration, introduction to clay | Movement: efficient and effective tennis-specific movement | Movement: increase complexity for multi directional |
| Mobility: static & dynamic stretching (bend/flex, extend, turn) | Mobility: teaching routines w/emphasis on Shoulder / Hip / Spine / Ankle | Flexibility & Mobility: corrective exercise from HPP, routine established | Flexibility & Mobility: Uncontrollable / reactionary |
| Strength: static & dynamic balance, basic squattting / pulling / pushing exercises | Strength: introduce external loads & emphasis on core/hip/shoulder/back | Strength: ability to increase volume &/or load | Strength: increase volume &/or intensity increased |
| Conditioning: endurance built from physical activity / game play | Conditioning: increasing requirements for aerobic capacity | Conditioning: increase aerobic intensity & volume, start anaerobic work | Conditioning: increase performance specific tolerances |
| Power: developed in movement & coordination, and through game play | Power: introduce proper posture & positioning for producing/absorbing force | Power: increase demands for producing/absorbing force | Power: increased complexity for producing/absorbing force |
