BEATBOX ANTHOLOGY

Introduction

Beat Box Anthology

The first drum machines were manufactured in the 1960's, designed to imitate the sounds of drums and percussion instruments. These drum machines utilized analog synthesis and typically offered few options for customizing their sound. In the 80's drum machines used low resolution digital samples - these quickly became popular and were used pervasively throughout pop music and the growing hip-hop movement. In the 90's, with the continuing development of technology, sound quality greatly improved. Drum machines became increasingly capable but conversely, as their specifications improved, they began to lose some of the character that made their predecessors so unique.

With Beat Box Anthology we've set out to capture a full spectrum of these machines - allowing you to instantly call up the analog classics or newer digital models. Including cult machines to lesser known and rare models that saw very small production runs, giving you a huge diversity of sounds and character at your disposal.

Each of the 80 machines we approached were sampled at 24 bit / 96 kHz using high-end DI boxes and ADCs to attain the best sound quality possible. In addition to precise sound captures, the entire library of over 10,000 samples were individually mastered by Chris Gerhinger at Sterling Sound, resulting in an immediate, punchy, world-class sound.
