Christmas coloring sheets for 1st grade

Dilemma: You've found the perfect wallpaper (or nightstand, curtains, carpets, blankets, or any other statement design element) for your bedroom, but the color doesn't match your current bed. You can try your luck with colors offered from traditional retailers, but you're more likely to end up with an inappropriate kind of rogue plate than a real aesthetic pulled together. Enter Flaneur. The startup, launched by former Columbia classmates Lu Xiong and Tianjiao Saikhantal Yu in 2015, has joined a growing number of small firms seeking to shake up the bed business (think Boll & Branch and Hill House Home). Offering its highlights? Sheets that match the color. A few of flaneur's sheet services. Photo: Courtesy of Flaneur Until recently, bedding was a mostly handy purchase decision, allowing very low quality and non-personal products on the market, Yu said. Most bedding is either luxurious but bleached in color or colorful but of low quality. From day one, we wanted Flaneur to be a premium and modern brand with a personalized component that would make it completely different from anything else on the market. We want customers to stop affecting white bedding as the only way to complete a well-designed room and instead, express themselves through color. We also feel customers should have a strong voice and emotional connection to the final product they buy. Customers have a few choices: They can choose from several colors with Flaneur's previous name or artist-inspired collections, pantone shade prescriptions or provide a watch to match customization. The 100% organic Supima cotton bedding is then dyed to order and washed in advance to ensure no bleeding or shrinkage. Using the correct recipes to get the correct nuances, the program opens up virtually limitless possibilities for bedroom decoration. As such, the founders hope to attract not only discerning consumers, but to designers looking for a new level of specificity. Flaneur offers interior designers a unique, modern and sophisticated outing to customize customers' bedding. Xiong said. This customization service allows the bedroom design to be more controlled, as the entire color wheel is accessible. For those who may be less decisive, Flaneur offers suggestions and support. Customers who either don't know what color they want or who knows but can't find the perfect shade can work with Flaneur's color experts to find the perfect shade, says Yu. For example, we had a customer show us a blanket, which is a gift of celebration of craft, and ask them To match the shade with a set of plates, and we were able to do it. It is also a great way for vigilant colors to ease into using darker colors at home. We've seen a good number of customers repeat, and, interestingly, their decisions become more personal and different from the last, last. Notes. It is not uncommon for customers to start with a neutral color and then gradually move to an edgy, funkier shade such as scarlet, Turkish blue, or coral red. When the possibilities are endless, it'd be a waste to stick to beige. My scariest day in high school was always the day the nuns came up with the report card. Sure, I'll be filled with Bs and Cs, the profile of a less motivated student. So it seemed strange that I was eager to get a report card from my employees on the eve of my first year as editor-in-editor of Fast Company. But I was determined to work on my leadership skills. When I found ImproveNow.com, an anonymous online service that allows employees to send their boss a performance review, I immediately buy in. Getting a quick bottom-up rating for $9.95 per person seems like a bargain to me, whether you're an executive or a team leader. There is another advantage to this test as well: These results will not end up in a computer file in the human services department. They are for you and you alone. If you accept them in a spirit of constructive criticism, you can use the results to make your co-working environment happier, more productive and more complete for everyone, ImproveNow.com CEO and executive coach James Povec explains. Or that's the theory, anyway. All told, I asked 11 employees to answer 60 questions in 12 different categories 2 2015 2015 by experts in organizational and professional development. They range from evaluating my ability to create trust to my skills to invented the future, i.e., creating an inspiring vision of what comes next. In the category of exploiting moments of truth, my team members were asked, Is your boss open and supportive when you have to inform him of errors or problems with your work? and Does your boss see the problem as opportunity rather than an embarrassment or discomfort? Obviously, some of these questions are the right goal. Others mean less, at least to me. I got one of my lowest points, a D+, in response to is your boss training you to do his job? I'm still kind of new here, thank you, so my priority is not to develop team members as successors, but to get the product right. The first time I logged on to see my score, I had that feeling of sinking high school. In most cases, they are Bs and Cs, with a plus or minus here or there. I have a class C measly for planning, although we have never missed a deadline since I was editor. And I think the nuns are hard. Even knowing that most average boss C+ points did not help. As the editor of a magazine devoted to intelligent and enlightened leadership, I would never want to be merely average. My highest score? The team gave me an A- with three questions: Does your workplace get rid of abusive and demeaning behavior?, does your boss love him?, does your boss love him? Not? and How do you understand how your company makes money? Thank God for that. Much more useful than the overall class, though, was a short training session I had with Povec (obviously, there's an extra charge for that). He urged me to share my results with colleagues and publicly vowed to improve. Thank them for their high scores and votes of trust, Mr. Povec advised. Once people feel you are being authentic and genuine, you should apologize for let them down on your weaker score. I'll do it and more and have started to address some of the weaker points. The whole process reaffirmed my belief that I needed to work harder in communicating with my team. Best of all, this self-examination finally helped me see the value of the report card. What you'll NeedOne's whole chenille trunk and half small stems and large small wooden side jingle bell jingle Bell Glue gun and hotmelt sticky Pull Ribbon Make ItHat: Cut a 1-1/2-inch diameter semicircular feel. Wrap the surrounding semicircular shape from one point to another to form a cone, leaving a small hole in the head; hot glue to ensure safety. Scarf: Cut a 1/2-x-4-inch piece of feel; the edge ends with scissors. Cut a small slit vertically about 1 3/4 inches from one end to the opposite end of the towel to pass through. Body: Bend a chenille trunk in half and, in the following order, thread material on the curved point to about halfway down the trunk: large seeds for the body, face seeds, felt caps, small jingle bells. Leave about 3/4 inch on the jingle bell and form the trunk into a loop. Then start from the opposite end: Thread 4 small particles onto each leg and bend the head to form the foot. Use half the chenille trunk to make the arm by focusing and twisting around the neck area of the elf. Thread 4 small particles onto each arm and bend the heads to form hands. Wrap the towel around the chimpanzee's neck, then strip the fiber ribbon through the top loop and hang. Insert one end of the decorative chain through the holes, and thread the small grain into the chain inside the cup. Bring the decorative chain back through the hole and tie the ends together to form an upside-down cup loop on the card stock, trace around it with a pencil, and then cut 1/4 inch outside the line with decorative edge scissors. Use a small brush to fill the middle of the card stock with white glue, and sprinkle with opaque white sparkles. Set aside to dry. PenguinsFold a 6-inch piece of orange chenille trunk in half. Form the body by creating a loose spiral around the orange chenille trunk with a black chenille trunk. Loop the two heads of the orange chenille trunk to form the paws. Tuck a 1/2-inch piece of white chenille trunk into the head and under the open of the black chenille body. Fold the orange stem head down to form the beak. Use punching holes to make the eyes from black and white feel and glue on. To finish: Once the glitter is completely dry, the penguin is safe to base with strong hand-crafted glue. Press signs (glue pieces of paper to toothpicks) into the white clay and stand it next to the penguin. Add the glue manually around the rim of the cup and glue to the card stock. Hold in place until the glue is placed. Paste a piece of silver chenille trunk at the junction of plastic cups and card stocks. Credit: Alison Miksch Your kids will love seeing their personal sugar cookies hanging from trees. Heat oven to 350 degrees F. On a clean surface, knead 3/4 cups of all-purpose flour into 1 tube (19 ounces) of cold cookie sugar powder until combined. Roll out the dough to a 1/4-inch thickness. Cut wreaths and star shapes using cookie cutter. Place 2 inches apart on the cookie sheets. Using a straw, poke holes at the top of cookies; for 15 to 20 minutes. Collect Dough and repeat to make more cookies. Let it cool for 3 minutes. Switch to a wire rack and let it cool completely. In an over-low power mixer, beat together 1 box (16 ounces) of candies' sugar, 2 tablespoons of egg white powder, and 5 tablespoons of water. Increase the speed and beat 5 minutes. Divide into 4 bowls. Cover and set aside a bowl. With the remaining icing divided, the color is part aqua-blue, a red, and a green-yellow shade using icing colors. Transfer a third of each colored and white icing to the pastry bag equipped with #3 written lyrics. With the remaining freezing, sprinkle in a few drops of water to thin out. Frosted wreaths with thin icing blue water and stars with thin white icing. Using packing icing, name the pipe into the lower half of the wreath and pipe berries with the leaves on the upper half; pipe names and color dots on the stars. Leave to dry completely before hanging. Makes about 2 dozen. Ad Credit: Alison Miksch Treats Your Child to Delicious Gingerbread Snacks. Heat the oven to 325 degrees Fahrenheit. Combine 3/4 cup of hot water and 1/4 cup of butter in a large bowl. Stir until the butter melts. Add 1/2 cup of powdered milk, 1 teaspoon of salt, and 1 large egg, beat. Stir in 2 cups of whole wheat flour, 1 cup of oats quickly, and 1/4 cup of wheat germ. Mix until the dough forms. Top a dough surface to form a hard dough. Roll the dough out to a thickness of 1/2 inch and cut out the dog bone shape using a cookie cutter. Place on a baking sheet and bake for 50 minutes. Let it cool completely. Store in sealed containers. Makes about 2 1/2 dozen. Credit: Alison Miksch Add a little sophistication to your table with nape stamped.
