Schools
The Vanderbilt Program in Hearing and Speech Sciences is ranked first in the country by U.S. News and World Report. The M.S.-SLP program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Degree Program
The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson Center (VWBC) is one of the largest multidisciplinary teams in the nation. Within the VWBC, over 20,000 square feet are dedicated to graduate studies in communication disorders. Additionally, the Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VUMC) and its affiliated hospitals provide a wide variety of health care training venues for our graduate students. The Department also has affiliations with public and private schools. These facilities provide opportunities for exposure to the full gamut of inpatient and outpatient speech-language pathology services as well as dual education, audiology, and otolaryngology programs. Within the Department, our large clinical service programs and affiliations with community hospitals allow over 70,000 patient visits annually.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), and the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson B.S. program prepares students for professional careers in speech-language pathology. This is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders. It is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt M.S.-SLP degree program is in accordance with the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology. The course of study requires approximately 120 – 140 credit hours, including the core and required courses. Students are expected to self-identify their clinical experiences in a team; a strong work ethic; and excellent oral and written communication skills. In addition, Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study are required by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Minimum Requirements
All students must possess: GRE scores consistent with Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study in communication sciences and disorders; and other related professional experience, such as work in communication sciences and disorders. Students have the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience. The Department offers M.S.-SLP students the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience.

Schools
The Vanderbilt Program in Hearing and Speech Sciences is ranked first in the country by U.S. News and World Report. The M.S.-SLP program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Degree Program
The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson Center (VWBC) is one of the largest multidisciplinary teams in the nation. Within the VWBC, over 20,000 square feet are dedicated to graduate studies in communication disorders. Additionally, the Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VWBC) and its affiliated hospitals provide a wide variety of health care training venues for our graduate students. The Department also has affiliations with public and private schools. These facilities provide opportunities for exposure to the full gamut of inpatient and outpatient speech-language pathology services as well as dual education, audiology, and otolaryngology programs. Within the Department, our large clinical service programs and affiliations with community hospitals allow over 70,000 patient visits annually.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), and the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson B.S. program prepares students for professional careers in speech-language pathology. This is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders. It is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt M.S.-SLP degree program is in accordance with the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology. The course of study requires approximately 120 – 140 credit hours, including the core and required courses. Students are expected to self-identify their clinical experiences in a team; a strong work ethic; and excellent oral and written communication skills. In addition, Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study are required by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Minimum Requirements
All students must possess: GRE scores consistent with Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study in communication sciences and disorders; and other related professional experience, such as work in communication sciences and disorders. Students have the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience. The Department offers M.S.-SLP students the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience.

Schools
The Vanderbilt Program in Hearing and Speech Sciences is ranked first in the country by U.S. News and World Report. The M.S.-SLP program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Degree Program
The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson Center (VWBC) is one of the largest multidisciplinary teams in the nation. Within the VWBC, over 20,000 square feet are dedicated to graduate studies in communication disorders. Additionally, the Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VWBC) and its affiliated hospitals provide a wide variety of health care training venues for our graduate students. The Department also has affiliations with public and private schools. These facilities provide opportunities for exposure to the full gamut of inpatient and outpatient speech-language pathology services as well as dual education, audiology, and otolaryngology programs. Within the Department, our large clinical service programs and affiliations with community hospitals allow over 70,000 patient visits annually.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), and the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson B.S. program prepares students for professional careers in speech-language pathology. This is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders. It is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt M.S.-SLP degree program is in accordance with the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology. The course of study requires approximately 120 – 140 credit hours, including the core and required courses. Students are expected to self-identify their clinical experiences in a team; a strong work ethic; and excellent oral and written communication skills. In addition, Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study are required by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Minimum Requirements
All students must possess: GRE scores consistent with Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study in communication sciences and disorders; and other related professional experience, such as work in communication sciences and disorders. Students have the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience. The Department offers M.S.-SLP students the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience.

Schools
The Vanderbilt Program in Hearing and Speech Sciences is ranked first in the country by U.S. News and World Report. The M.S.-SLP program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Degree Program
The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson Center (VWBC) is one of the largest multidisciplinary teams in the nation. Within the VWBC, over 20,000 square feet are dedicated to graduate studies in communication disorders. Additionally, the Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VWBC) and its affiliated hospitals provide a wide variety of health care training venues for our graduate students. The Department also has affiliations with public and private schools. These facilities provide opportunities for exposure to the full gamut of inpatient and outpatient speech-language pathology services as well as dual education, audiology, and otolaryngology programs. Within the Department, our large clinical service programs and affiliations with community hospitals allow over 70,000 patient visits annually.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), and the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson B.S. program prepares students for professional careers in speech-language pathology. This is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders. It is an approach to patient care with a specific focus on the identification, evaluation, and treatment of communication disorders.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The Vanderbilt M.S.-SLP degree program is in accordance with the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology. The course of study requires approximately 120 – 140 credit hours, including the core and required courses. Students are expected to self-identify their clinical experiences in a team; a strong work ethic; and excellent oral and written communication skills. In addition, Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study are required by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Minimum Requirements
All students must possess: GRE scores consistent with Vanderbilt University’s standards for graduate study in communication sciences and disorders; and other related professional experience, such as work in communication sciences and disorders. Students have the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience. The Department offers M.S.-SLP students the opportunity to apply. Students without an undergraduate background in communication sciences and disorders will require extra coursework and clinical experience.

Schools
The Vanderbilt Program in Hearing and Speech Sciences is ranked first in the country by U.S. News and World Report. The M.S.-SLP program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Degree Program
The Vanderbilt Bill Wilkerson Center (VWBC) is one of the largest multidisciplinary teams in the nation. Within the VWBC, over 20,000 square feet are dedicated to graduate studies in communication disorders. Additionally, the Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VWBC) and its affiliated hospitals provide a wide variety of health care training venues for our graduate students. The Department also has affiliations with public and private schools. These facilities provide opportunities for exposure to the full gamut of inpatient and outpatient speech-language pathology services as well as dual education, audiology, and otolaryngology programs. Within the Department, our large clinical service programs and affiliations with community hospitals allow over 70,000 patient visits annually.

The M.S.-SLP degree program is accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), and the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.