MANAGING WITH STRATEGIC INTENT

A three-day program to help you better manage people, information and your responsibilities

Management isn’t simply a talent. It’s a discipline, with skills that can be cultivated and strengthened over time.

Through this highly interactive three-day course you’ll gain a deeper understanding of some of the skills that are important for effective managers (and organizations): how to act with strategic intent, exercise influence, build and maintain networks, seek and share information, anticipate emerging opportunities and challenges, and continuously innovate to improve structures and processes.

Working in teams to evaluate real management scenarios from case studies, you’ll also learn how better to apply these key skills to your own career and organization.

The Bottom Line Value to You and Your Organization

You’ll learn ideas and techniques you can apply right away, including:

- How to manage people (including yourself)
- Managing information
- Managing upwards
- Managing within your unit
- Managing outside the organization

Your Instructor

Ranga Ramanujam, Ph.D.
Professor of Management
Vanderbilt Owen Graduate School of Management

Professor Ramanujam is a leading researcher and consultant on the organizational causes and consequences of operational failures in high-risk work settings, particularly health care. His current research, which has appeared in a variety of management and health care journals, examines the role of leadership, communication, and learning processes in enhancing the quality and safety of health care. Professor Ramanujam serves on the editorial boards of Organization Science and the Stanford University Press series on High Reliability and Crisis Management. He has consulted for such organizations as HCA, the Vanderbilt Heart and Vascular Institute, the Pittsburgh Regional Healthcare Initiative, Pure Safety, the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, and Underwriters Laboratories.
