Title:
Paid Journalism Internship in Washington, D.C.

Qualifications:
Excellent communication skills (written and verbal) and a desire to practice responsible journalism.

Job Description:
Since 1977, the National Journalism Center, a project of Young America's Foundation, has provided aspiring journalists with the premier opportunity to learn the principles and practice of responsible reporting. The National Journalism Center combines 12 weeks of on-the-job training at a Washington, D.C.-based media outlet and once-weekly training seminars led by prominent journalists, policy experts, and NJC faculty.

The program matches interns with print, broadcast, or online media outlets based on their interests and experience. Interns spend an average of 35-40 hours per week gaining practical, hands-on journalism experience. Potential placements include the Washington Times, the Washington Examiner, USA Today, C-SPAN, Fox News, and more.

Students will attend the NJC seminar one day a week, sharpening their writing and reporting skills and gaining a better understanding of media, society, and public policy, and the intersection between the three in Washington, D.C. and nationwide. For more information on the program, visit njc.yaf.org.

Opportunities: Internships are offered during the spring semester, and can be done on a 3-day track plan, or a 5-day track plan, to accommodate class schedules. Summer internships are offered full-time, 5 days a week.
