This summer, CNBC is hosting an interactive workshop at the NAHJ 2018 International Training Conference and Career Fair designed to teach on-air reporters and multimedia journalists how to break down financial news events quickly and report stories clearly for a global audience.

By participating in this free workshop, experienced journalists will expand their reporting skills and engage with CNBC talent and producers. Some workshop attendees may be selected after the workshop for an opportunity to visit CNBC Global Headquarters for interviews with members of CNBC’s executive team.

REQUEST AN APPLICATION

Who: Current on-air reporters and multimedia journalists with 3-5 years of professional experience

How: Send your resume and contact info to bizreportingworkshop@cnbc.com

When: Applications are due by 11:59pm PT on June 15, 2018

See Yourself at CNBC
First in Business Worldwide

CNBC will have the sole discretion on the selection process. Workshop attendees must be registered, or plan to register, for the NAHJ 2018 International Training Conference and Career Fair. Attendees are responsible for their registration and travel costs to the convention. Attendees must possess all the basic qualification and eligibility requirements for the CNBC Business Reporting Workshop. For more information about the workshop, CNBC, and the eligibility requirements and qualifications, please visit www.facebook.com/CNBCBizReportingWorkshop.

CNBC is an equal opportunity employer, offering a great work environment, challenging career opportunities, professional training and competitive compensation.