Background

After graduating from Monash University, John began his career in financial services, gaining experience across a range of finance-related roles that provided a strong foundation in investment markets and client advice.

In 2004, he joined Macquarie and progressed to a Financial Adviser role in 2006. Over his decade with the firm, he advised private clients on tailored investment strategies and portfolio solutions aligned to their financial objectives and risk profiles.

John later spent five years with Taylor Collison, further developing his expertise in private wealth management, portfolio construction and management, asset allocation and long-term investment strategy.

Since joining Ord Minnett in 2019, John has continued to provide strategic, client-focused advice with an emphasis on disciplined investing and long-term wealth creation. He works closely with clients to understand their objectives, risk tolerance and broader financial circumstances, delivering clear, practical advice to help them navigate changing markets and achieve their financial goals.
