When it comes to binders, they're no exception – adding design, color, patterns, and labels is actually more fun with binders! Of course, it can't be too bland or boring with the organization. It is best to spice it up with cuteness and color! That's why I love these free editable Binder Covers & Spines. Free Editable Binder Covers & Spines Supplies: Binder with clear visual cover (can be a size: 1, 1.5 and 2, etc.) Map material (can use normal printer paper, but printing is bolder and much brighter on the map stock) (get it at the bottom of the post) Dividers (optional – if you need to organize the inside of your binder)Printer Simple steps: Creating the binder covers and spines is super easy! Each of the back covers is available in three size options: 1, 1.5 and 2. You can download the covers and spines with the button at the bottom of this post. To edit and add text, use a program such as Canva.com, PicMonkey.com, or even Photoshop or Microsoft Word. Follow the super short video below, in which I will show you how to add text to the covers and spines with the free program Canva.com: If you have your Binder covers print, I would suggest to print on cardboard. This allows the cover to slip easily into the cover pocket without bending, and as mentioned in the supply list, the color is much brighter when printed on cardboard, compared to normal paper. I held my breath every time I printed something in full color. Sometimes I would even put things like Staples in a printing center. But these days, I'm not all worried about ink ink I switched to the Instant Ink Program with HP. I got rid of my ink hog printer, bought a new printer and signed up for the Instant Ink Program. Now every page I print is just .03! When printing ink-heavy designs (such as binder covers & spines), I don't have to worry about how much ink I use! Would you like to try it? Register now in the program. The first month is FREE! If you hate it, you can always cancel, but I can guarantee that you will love it as much as I do!
