Pharnesian Picasso

Probably the most famous artist in our collection, Pharnesian Picasso is best known as the father of Cubism. What most people don’t know is that he was first inspired by a beautiful block of cheddar cheese. He also combined his love of cheese and painting in his early “Blue Cheese” period, when he painted everything in different shades of blue.

Andy Mousehole

Andy Mousehole was an American artist and film director known for his interviews in Pop Art. He moved to New York City in 1969 and although he was a successful artist at the time, he quickly began to make his mark. Mousehole learned the printing process, which meant he could reproduce the same image again and again, using different colored inks. He chose to print immediately recognizable patterns, such as a portrait of the famous mouse Across The Rainbow and the Cheshire’s smile.

Jean-Michel Basquiat

Jean-Michel Basquiat was an American artist with Haitian and Portuguese-Brazilian heritage. He grew up in Brooklyn, New York, and as a teenager would spray paint graffiti onto buildings. Although it was often too small for the people of New York City to notice, he became famous at the art scene by the early 1980s. Basquiat made the switch from graffiti artist to gallery artist when painted on abandoned objects, such as used trash cans in different parts of town, as well as...

Each kind has different leaves and bark that make it stand out from the rest. We’ll learn to tell the trees apart by looking at the way they’re dressed.

Yellow poplar’s bark feels rough. We tip our heads way back to see the sharply leaved trees on top. Its nickname is the tulip tree.

Blackberry’s a spindly tree, with hairy bristles and knobby bark that feels as scratchy as a bead. It might be scary in the dark.

We lean against a rural bench tree. The bark feels cool and smooth as silk. Its small leaves are shiny green with jagged edges at the end.

POLAR BEAR

Polar bears are the largest land-based predators on Earth weighing up to 1,700 pounds. Their main food source is the fat and muscle of seals they hunt. Their long, thick, black hair is actually white. The dark appearance is only due to the pigment in their skin. Their bodies help them in the water too. Large flippers act as paddles, and their long, thick tails help them stay afloat. Their strong necks help keep their heads above the water.

Mother polar bears nurse their cubs, allowing them to grow and develop. They are rather large for their size, but the litters are usually two or three. They are born with their mother, and she nurses them for seven months before giving them food of their own.

Petite Mouse Takes a Nap

KARIN ARGOUĐ

Sweet little Petite Mouse doesn’t want to nap (much like a child you probably know). With one tiny nose and two scurrying feet, she’ll slip through your fingers! But with a little help from little hands, you can make sure Petite Mouse gets some rest. With soft illustrations, a fun counting element, and finger holes for extra delight, Petite Mouse Takes a Nap is the perfect naptime book to turn wiggly fingers into sleepy eyes. Ages 0–3

Karin Argoud is an actress best known for her role as Sonya Harper in the series Mama’s Family. She is also a freelance news journalist, an author, and the happily married mother of two daughters who never really loved naptime. It was always quite the undertaking to get them to fall asleep. But she knew how important it was for them, and would sometimes go through stacks of books and songs to get them to faire dodo, which means “go to sleep” in French. How she would have treasured a book like Petite Mouse Takes a Nap! She is a first-generation American and is proud of her family’s French American citizenship. Her loving, wonderful parents were of French, German, and Lebanese descent, and she was raised hearing fairy tales, games, and songs from those countries. She, in turn, raised her daughters speaking French and immersed them in fairy tales, plays, and songs. She and her husband sent their daughters to Waldorf schools and raised them without television, their imaginations fed with storybooks, imaginative play, and puppetry. Petite Mouse Takes a Nap is her first children’s book, but she has more in mind.
