Rajinikanth starrer Kaala hit theaters today and while fans across the country have been queuing up outside cinemas since the morning hours, the Tamilrockers piracy website has leaked the movie online. Tamilrockers is notorious for leaking pirated versions of South Indian movies on their website and this leak has not been welcomed by Rajini fans. The link grew in the early hours of June 7 and Twitterati was quick to slam the site for killing the joy of millions of Rajini fans around the world. Aside from the piracy site, a few cases have been reported where audience members have been caught streaming the film live from theaters. Actor and producer Vishal, who is also president of the Tamil Film Producers Council, was quick to act in such a case where the man who aired the Singapore film was arrested shortly after he began broadcasting the film. At work @Dhananjayang sir. He's been arrested. I got it from Cathay Singapore. — Vishal (@VishalKOfficial) June 6, 2018 According to social media screenshots, Tamilrockers put a HQ and HD print on the film. Tweets also suggest that the film was released at 5:28 a.m. Fans urged Vishal and Dhanush (the film's producer) to take strong action against Tamilrockers. Tamilrockers administrators are still on the run, but they managed to leak all the big Southern films to their website, thus facilitating the piracy racket that prevents the sanctity of a new release.
