Foundation Archives Update

By Roxanna Erickson Klein RN, PhD

Dallas, Texas

In January of 2005 I accepted an appointment to the role of Director of the Erickson Foundation Archives. It is both a privilege and a responsibility to assume this volunteer position; I am honored to serve.

Working with preservation and development of archival material, one confronts the same challenges that exist in other technical areas. The possibilities are developing and advancing quickly; as soon as a selection is made, other possibilities emerge. Our focus has been on choosing processes that not only will preserve the priceless materials that we have, but also will be amenable to future conversions as they are needed.

The initial goals set included fund-raising for the Archives, and digitation of the video materials of Milton Erickson. Thanks to the generosity of several donors we have raised sufficient resources to move forward with the digitation. Working with the staff at the Foundation, a plan for sending in one set of videos at a time is now in place, and this important step is underway.

Upon completion of this task, my next goal is to develop a pilot-project that will generate income for the Archives. Up until this year, the Archives has been built and evolved from the general resources of the Foundation. Now, perhaps we can develop a means by which the Archives can become more self-sufficient. Dr. Zeig and I will work together to create something for the purpose of bringing economic resources directly into the Archives.

Preservation and development of materials is a complex and costly proposition. But through it, we are entrusted not only with the past but also with the future of the work of Milton Erickson. I express deep appreciation to all who have contributed to this important mission, and I invite any comments, critique, or ideas. Please feel free to contact me at my home number 214-526-9634.
