Coaching Groups

Designed and delivered with coach and author Hilary Gallo — Coaching Groups provide a highly curated and transformative space for founders and other senior leaders to build self-awareness, while sharing and solving their most urgent challenges.

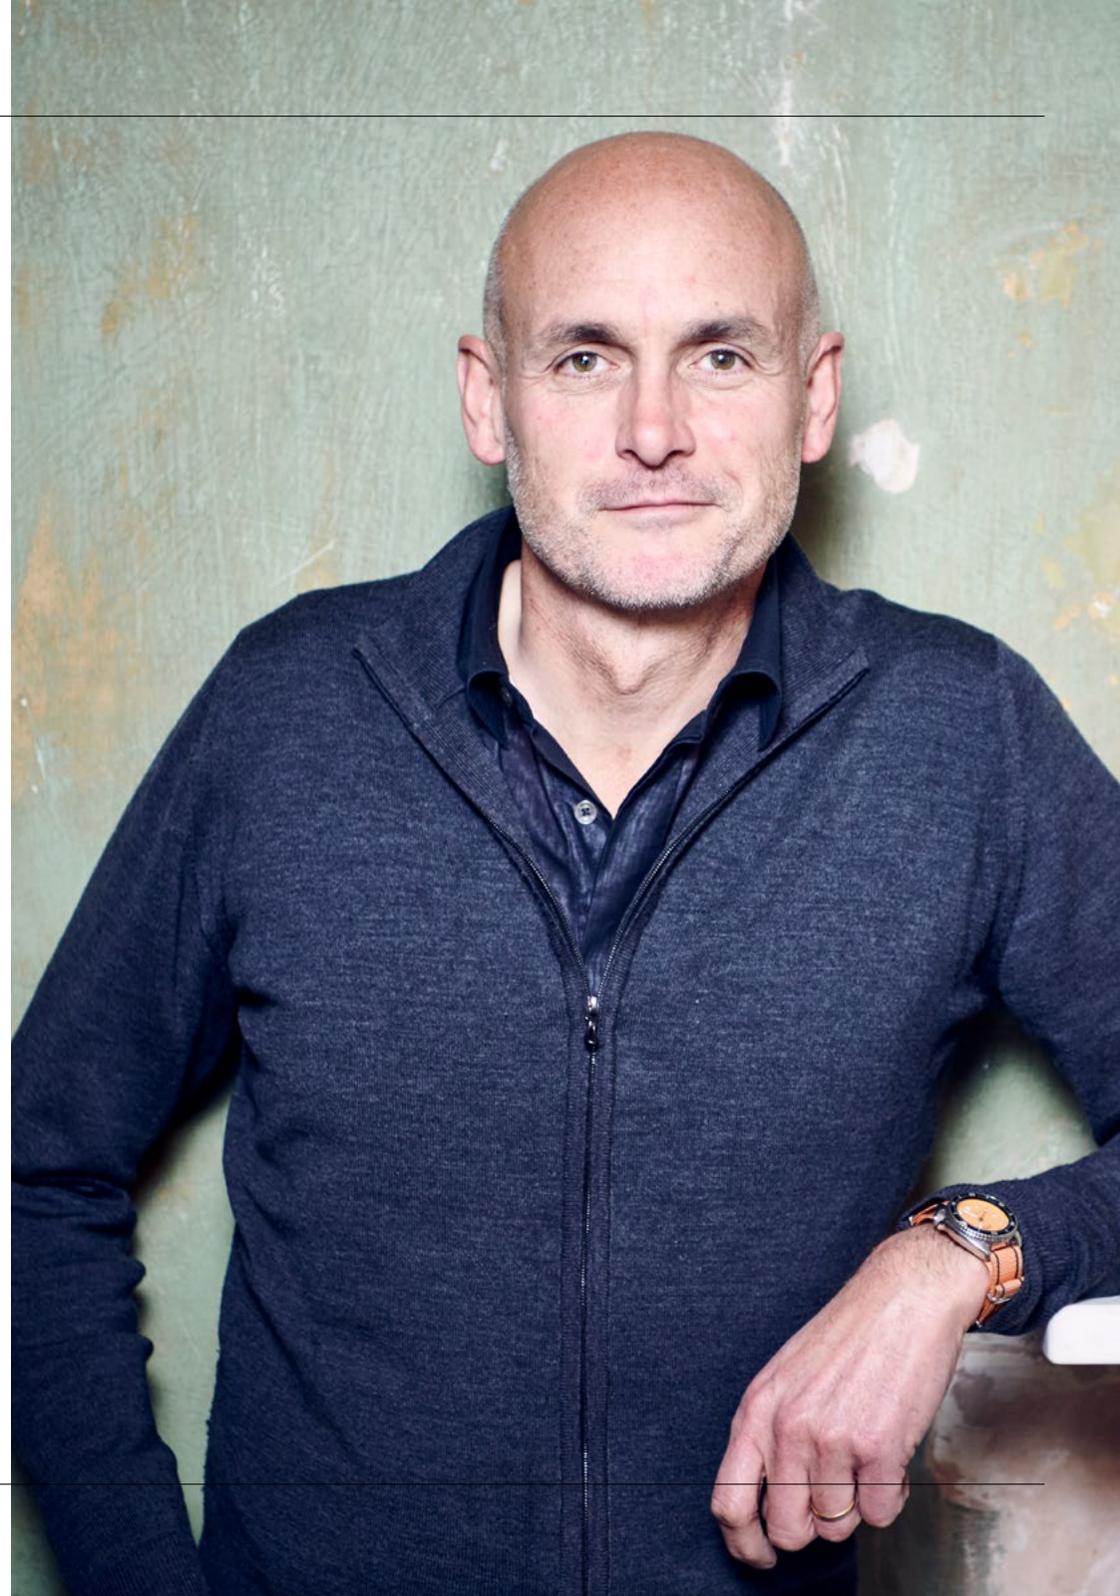

Participants join a cross-organisational group with up to ten members. Groups meet every six weeks for a four-hour session, facilitated by Hilary. In this high-quality and confidential learning space; leadership, business and broader challenges are tabled for discussion and collaborative exploration. At the close of each session actions are committed to, and accountability created. Each group is tightly curated to reflect career stage, and to avoid competition.

Who joins Coaching Groups?

Participants are drawn from the top of organisations, large and small — global businesses like The Guardian, Secret Escapes and Farfetch, fast-growth creative practices like Koto and SODA and cultural institutions like the V&A. All are open in their mindset and outlook, with current groups curated for founders, execs, department heads and newly promoted leaders.

About Hilary Gallo

Hilary started his career as a lawyer at Clifford Chance before becoming Commercial Director at Accenture and Capgemini. Today his focus is on enabling people, and supporting leaders and organisations facing change. As a mediator and executive coach, his emphasis is helping people to purposefully work to their strengths. His best-selling book 'The Power of Soft' will shortly be followed by a brand new publication titled 'Fear Hack'.

Spaces . Sessions are hosted in central, comfortable and conversationally conducive spaces. Shown is the apartment at Papermill Studios in Islington, very popular with current Coaching Groups — due to its privacy, abundant light and real fire.

From current participants.

“I’ve learned as much from hearing other peoples’ challenges deconstructed as I have from discussing my own.”

“Truly motivating learning, and a great new group of allies”

“I leave each and every session with a notebook full of things to follow through on, and commitment to put into action”

“ I felt everyone came in with challenges and came out with new perspectives.”

“What began feeling self-indulgent has become the most protected part of my diary.”

“Time on the business, not in the business.”

“Hilary artfully directs the conversation — drawing out decisions and making them stick.”
