MARSHALL

THE GEM CITY OF MICHIGAN

Three-quarters of a century ago the compilation of a "Directory of the City of Marshall and Vicinity" would have been a simple task, involving brief time and labor. The names of the pioneer settlers could have been easily inscribed on one page, while a list of embryonic industries and public institutions would, perhaps, have partially filled a second page. Many of the family names of the pioneer settlers are represented by descendants in the present directory, while others are inscribed only on the marble records of Oakridge: Such are the revered names of John D. Pierce, first Superintendent of Public Instruction in Michigan, and Isaac Crary, who achieved national fame as the founder of Michigan's educational system, which has been adopted by many other states.

The pages of this directory bear witness to the social and intellectual growth of Marshall and to its general prosperity. Marshall has ever had a peculiarly firm and tenacious hold of the loyal affection of its citizens. So universal is this sentiment that it has become a generally accepted adage that those who have once lived in Marshall desire to continue their residence in this pleasant and delightful city. There are many reasons which might be enumerated to account for Marshall's popularity as a residential and business center, prominent among which are the following:

1. Marshall is an attractive city with broad streets, lined with magnificent shade trees, with excellent cement walks, situated in a healthful and delightful locality and surrounded by a prosperous farming community.
2. The county seat of one of the best counties in Michigan.
3. It is on the Michigan Central, Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw and Michigan United Railways.
4. It has a first-class municipal water supply—one of the very best in Michigan.
5. It has an excellent municipal water power.
6. It can never suffer from freshets as it lays so high above the river.
7. It has a fine municipal electric lighting plant.
8. It has excellent schools admitting to the University of Michigan.
9. It has a roster of nine churches—take your choice.
10. It has many social and fraternal organizations, lodges, clubs, etc.
11. It is an economic place in which to live and do business.
12. Electric power is 25 per cent cheaper than in larger cities.
13. It has no labor troubles.
14. It has several prosperous, expanding manufacturing industries, with room and ambition for more.
