

I'm not robot  reCAPTCHA

Continue

Free coloring sheets of butterflies

Thank you for taking the time to visit my fundraising page. Cancer is happening right now, which is why I'm fundraising right now for Cancer Research UK. There's no time to waste! Donate to my page today and help bring forward the day all cancers are cured. Cancer is happening right now, which is why we're fundraising right now for Cancer Research UK. There's no time to waste! Donate today and help bring forward the day when all cancers are cured. Donating through these pages is simple, fast and completely secure. Your details are safe with Cancer Research UK. Getty Images Even small creatures would have bed bugs have favorite colors. Nice, isn't it? Not if your bed bedding happens to be exactly that shade. In a new study published online in the Journal of Medical Entomological, researchers examined the colors that common bedbugs prefer by placing small pieces of cardstock in eight different colors inside petri dishes. A bed beetle, fallen in the middle, had 10 minutes to decide which to hide under. The first two color options: red and black. Red, which bed bugs chose about 29 percent of the time, can signal the presence of other bed bugs. Initially we thought bedbugs would prefer red because the blood is red and that's what they feed on, the study's co-author, Corraine McNeill, an assistant professor of biology at Union College in Nebraska, said in a statement. However, after doing the study, the main reason we think they preferred red is because the bed bugs themselves appear red, so they go to these harborage because they want to be with other bed bugs. Apparently, bed bugs like to hug (in red sheets). Black came in almost second, with bugs choosing shade 23 percent of the time. Scientists assume this because cockroaches naturally seek darkness: Bedbugs are mostly nocturnal and hide in the corners of mattresses and other corners before going out for a blood snack, Newsweek reports. Fascinating. Getty Images Insects use visual cues for a wide variety of behaviors, including, but not limited to, recognizing hosts, finding colleagues, ovipositing [eggs], and seeking shelter, the researchers in the study write. Visual cues are often based on color perception. If you have yellow or green sheets, you're in luck. Bedbugs seemed to dislike these colors, probably because they resemble brightly lit areas that insects tend to avoid, according to a press release from the Entomological Society of America. Are you ready to burn your red and black sheets? Leave downstairs. Scientists suggest holding off on destroying bedding based on their color - for now. h/t: Curved This content is created and maintained by a third party and imported on this page to help users provide their email addresses. You may be able to find more information about this content and similar to piano.io Rocks and Stones are hardly natural solids and made of minerals. Some common rocks can be scratched with nails, such as shale, soap stone, gypsum rock, and peat. Others may be soft in the ground, but they harden once they spend time in the air. There are three main types of rocks: igneous rocks are formed when molten rocks (magma) cool and solidify. Some igneous rocks form when magma erupts from a volcano. Obsidian, basalt, and granite are all examples of igneous rocks. Sedimentary rocks are created when sediment layers (minerals, other rocks or organic materials) are compressed over time. Chalk, limestone and flint are all examples of sedimentary rocks. Metamorphic rocks are formed when the igneous and sedimentary rocks are exchanged by heat or intense pressure. Marble (limestone, a sedimentary rock) and the grain (from basalt, an igneous rock) are examples of metamorphic rocks. The stones are fascinating and easy to find. Try these activity ideas to learn more about them: Start a collection. Pick up rocks when you're on nature rides (if this is allowed) or outside running commissions. Look for rocks from different areas when traveling outside the state. You might even ask from out of state friends and relatives to send you interesting rocks that you find. Identify the stones you find. An empty egg box makes a large storage container for small rocks. You can write the name of each stone in the slot made to hold eggs or make a key inside the cardboard cover. Learn more about the rock cycle. Visit a natural history museum or planetarium. Most will have a collection of rock on screen. Experiment with your rock collection. Is your rock magnetic? Is it floating? How much does it weigh? Make a pet stone. Use the following free printable materials to help students learn rock-related terminology. Once they finish the worksheets, the young students will turn into amateur geologists in no time. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Vocabulary Study Sheet Use this study sheet to start learning about different types of rocks and rock-related terminology. Use a dictionary or the Internet to find the meaning of each term. Then match each with the correct definition. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Vocabulary Rocks in this activity, students become familiar with the vocabulary related to rock. Let your children use a dictionary or the internet to define each term in the word bank. Then they will write each word on the blank line next to the correct definition. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Word Search This activity allows students to review rock-related vocabulary in a fun way. Students may review every word. Then they will find the terms among the mixed letters in search of the word. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Crossword Puzzle This rock-themed crossword puzzle turns the vocabulary review into a game. Students will complete the puzzle with Terms. They may want to refer back to the vocabulary study sheet if they have trouble remembering any of the terms. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Alphabet Activity This activity allows students to practice word literacy while reviewing vocabulary associated with rocks. Instruct students to place each word in the word bank in the correct alphabetical order. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Spelling Worksheet On this printable, students can test their spelling skills with words associated with rocks. For each clue, children will select the correctly spelled word from the multiple-choice options. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Colorful Page Use this coloring page to supplement the study of rocks or as a quiet activity while reading aloud for your students about rocks and geology. This image shows Big Bend National Park in southwest Texas. Santa Elena Canyon has steep limestone cliffs, giving visitors a beautiful, first-hand view of sedimentary rocks. Beverly Hernandez Print PDF: Rocks Challenge Worksheet Use this printable to wrap the drive on the stones by challenging your students to show what they know about the stones. For each clue, students will circle the correct word in the multiple-choice options. 4 Mar 2011 French Developer Press Start Studio is best known for their hardcore action game, Twin Blades. However, the second Xbox Live game for Windows Phone 7 is at the opposite end of the game spectrum; Butterfly is one of the simplest, most casual Xbox Live games on Microsoft's mobile platform. The object of the game is to drive the titular butterfly around a garden, touching flowers to make them bloom. Players shoot the butterfly with one finger to move. Once all the flowers in one stage have been pollinated, an exit flower appears and is stopped at the next garden. Fly beyond the break for our full review. Nobody likes a Predator's carnivore complicating the butterfly's mission. Frogs, carnivorous plants and koi fish come from above the food chain, and that makes butterflies a fair game. Players must beware of their attacks in order to stay alive. Another insect also causes problems. Bees are unfeeling, just like in real life. They operate like stationary landmines, killing the player who flies in them. Easy is just as easy not Death is not much of an impediment in Butterfly. Players have unlimited lives, so the timer becomes the real villain. Each 8-step set shares the same timer. Finishing a set with a lot of spare time takes you to three medals. Waste a lot of time getting eaten and stung and it's game over. In theory, then, the challenge is to complete levels quickly by avoiding too many deaths. But in practice, I managed to complete the entire game with three stars in all but a stage at my first attempt, and I certainly didn't run out of time. The butterfly is too easy for his own good. Short as the Brevity Brevity insect lack of challenge. While there are 10 steps containing 6 sub-steps each, all of them can be completed in less than an hour. Better times (yawning) and collecting missed achievements can add extra playing time, but not much. In terms of achievements, they consist primarily of avoiding each type of predator attack 100 times and 20 times without taking a hit. It's a cinch to jump back into a completed level, find a predator, and just dodge away. No hyperbole - after an hour, we beat the game and scored all 12 achievements. They're not shorter than that. So simple Butterfly also suffers from a severe lack of personality. There is absolutely no story or even an ending to link the game levels together. Butterfly and enemies all look flat and simple, and their movements look like bad flash animations. Humorous animations would have breathed some life in them. The view above the game has no depth, although the trees above the garden cast shadows or sometimes hide the player's point of view. The garish color palette fails to impress. I love the catchy title song, although the ethereal stage music is nothing special. General Impression Butterfly is as generic as its name. It was probably just a contractual obligation for the developer, so Microsoft could have a sufficient number of Windows Phone 7 games launch. This game is slightly enjoyable for a few minutes, but the complete lack of deep play, challenge, or charm means it won't come back to it when everything is said and done. Butterfly would be suitable for young children, though. Anyone else should pass unless they don't mind paying a few dollars for some incredibly fast and easy achievements. Butterfly costs $2.99 on Marketplace. If you weren't afraid, there's a free trial. Grab the game here (Zune link) in Marketplace. Market.